

Dear Tourism Partner

We are delighted to welcome you to Ireland this week and we look forward to meeting with you and to showcasing what Ireland has to offer as a compelling and competitive holiday destination. We are very excited about our immediate business prospects. Our industry has made tremendous progress in enhancing our competitive position internationally. Also, visitor sentiment, tracked independently, is particularly strong and interest in Ireland amongst the international travel trade is buoyant.

This year is also a very special year for all of us in Irish tourism. It's the year of The Gathering 2013, a year-long celebration of authentic Irish culture and heritage with an open invitation to our friends, relations and leisure tourists to visit and participate. Some 3,500 'gatherings' have been organised so far and the response to date has been great.

In some respects our Meitheal event this week is also a kind of 'gathering'! In total, we have invited some 550 guests from the international travel trade – friends of Irish tourism with whom we have a special and hopefully lasting relationship. In fact, that authentic Irish cultural experience so central to all 'gatherings' will also feature within our Meitheal social programme during your stay.

While we celebrate our historic culture and heritage, we are also relentlessly pursuing and promoting imaginative and innovative ideas to stimulate both new and returning visitors.

This year, we will offer you a preview of an iconic visitor experience scheduled for the 2014 season. Branded the 'Wild Atlantic Way', this visitor experience takes its name from a new 2,000km touring route, the longest themed route of its kind in the world! Extending from our northern-most point to the southern tip of our island and hugging our wild Atlantic coastline, the Wild Atlantic Way promises a myriad of memorable authentically Irish visitor experiences, endless opportunities to engage with our traditions, customs and stories along what was once the edge of the known world.

My industry partners and my colleagues in Tourism Ireland and Fáilte Ireland are very much looking forward to sharing more of our stories with you and to showcasing much more of what Ireland can offer your business. Thank you for accepting our invitation to Meitheal and I look forward to welcoming you and meeting you during your stay with us.

Yours faithfully,

Shaun Quinn
Chief Executive, Fáilte Ireland

Being an Irish business, and having sold Ireland for more than twelve years, we are the go-to specialists on the back roads and special spots that are part of every trip to Ireland. Think of an adventure. Now think of an Authentic Adventure. Authentic Ireland connects our customers with trusted experts who can make their travel fantasies come true. The trick, no matter which adventure a customer embarks on—and we have quite a number of choices—is to become part of the experience, and enjoy it as a full participant. From city breaks and vacation rentals to fly/drive packages, group tours and special interest tours (including golf), we offer our clients everything within the Republic and Northern Ireland. We are interested in meeting every type of tourism supplier, from the smallest mom & pop organisations to the larger more established ones. We keep our eye out for any supplier who is unique and innovative. Someone who has something that our customers could not find on their own. We are continually working with the most progressive marketing companies and always on the lookout for new partners who are willing to work with us to create new offerings and custom options.
